GIGANTIC MISSILES DROPPED BY R. A. F. ON CITY OF MUNICH

Lavish Praise Heaped On The Pilots as Details of The Terrific Raid Emerge

2-TON AND 4-TON BOMBS City Turned Into A Blazing Inferno; Flames Visible 100 Miles Away

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(INS)—Lavish praise was heaped upon pilots of the Royal Air Force by Britain's press and public today as details emerged of the terrific damage wrought Saturday night in a 200-plane raid on Munich, birthplace of Nazism and Adolf Hitler's favorite city.

Giant Lancaster and other four-motored bombers of the RAF were over the Bavarian capital for half an hour, dropping two-ton and four-ton missiles which turned Munich into a blazing inferno. Flames from resulting fires were visible 100 miles away while vibrations from the explosions were felt in Basle, Switzerland, a distance of 200 miles away.

Britons learned with relish that Munich, setting place of the "peace pact" of 1938 which Hitler violated at his first opportunity, had at last been sought out by the RAF for one of its most damaging raids. Equally important was a large-scale assault on the rich industrial Saar Valley, first of the areas seized from German domination to be taken back by Hitler in a surprise "plebiscite" soon after his rise to power.

Newspapers Open Big Scrap Campaign

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—(INS)—Newspapers throughout the state and nation today threw their weight behind an intensive four-week campaign to uncover and collect millions of tons of badly-needed scrap iron and steel lying idle in homes, farms, and factories.

In full-page ads, the papers reported: "The nation's steel mills are running out of scrap. They haven't enough on hand for even 30 days more. When this is gone they may have to shut down—for all new steel is 50 per cent scrap."

The drive was undertaken at the request of War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson and is backed by the 1390 daily and approximately 10,000 weekly newspapers in the country.

PROTEST CLOSING OF NEWPORTVILLE SCHOOL

Residents of Area and Members of School Board Plan To Discuss Problem

NAME REPRESENTATIVES

NEWPORTVILLE, Sept. 21.—At a protest meeting, held at Fergusonville Community Building yesterday afternoon, residents of this area voiced their feelings over the closing of Newportville public school building, due to shortage of teachers.

The decision reached at the session was to arrange for a meeting between school directors and representatives of the community.

Representatives named are: Mrs. Charles Everett, Mrs. John Lewis, and Mr. Baker, of Newportville; Mrs. Joseph Campbell, Mrs. E. McQuaid, and Elwyn Smith, of Fergusonville.

The date of the meeting is yet to be set. Clarence Young, a representative of the board of directors, presided; with James Weston, president of the Fergusonville Community Association, also addressing the group.

The Newportville school was closed at the end of last Tuesday's sessions, due to lack of teachers. Children who had been attending classes in that building, have since been attending Maple Shade building. Two sessions were arranged to care for the increase at Maple Shade, with children in this area in grades 1, 3, 5 and 6, leaving each morning at about nine o'clock; and those in grades 2 and 4 leaving at noon-time for afternoon sessions.

Group of Tots Enjoy A Joint Birthday Party

A group of children on Monroe street whose birthdays occur this month, celebrated their anniversaries on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McGinley, Monroe street.

The occasion marked the second birthday anniversaries of the following children: David White, Jack McGinley, Jack Fletcher, John Rogers, Joyce Craven, Dorothy Bahrenburg.

The mothers of the children sponsored the party. Elaine Craven and Harry White were also guests.

A birthday gift was received by each child, and each received a balloon and a basket of candy as favors. Refreshments were served.

TOKYO BOUND

KNOLLWOOD FIELD, N. C.—(INS)—Technical Sergeant Leonard Green, a member of a training squadron of the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command at Jefferson Barracks, hopes he is on his way back to Tokyo.

Sgt. Green's desire to return to the Nippon capital boiled down to one thing—to see the downfall of the emperor whom he saw crowned while on duty in the Japanese capital as American consul. He spent nine years on consular duty in Japan.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT (Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

On Toughness

Washington, Sept. 19.

WITHIN recent months there has been a somewhat tiresome repetition of the word "tough" in the news emanating from Washington. Few writers or commentators seem able to refrain from saying that this official is going to get "tough," or that official has given orders to become "tough," or that from now on this board or that commission is planning to "toughen up."

PRACTICALLY every key man in the war organization has been put into this tough class by now. According to the reports, they are all tough, but the toughness does not appear to have lessened the confusion nor improved conditions. Of course, saying a man is going to be tough does not mean much. It

RESCUE SQUAD IN LETTER APPEALS FOR FINANCIAL SUPPORT

Mails Many Letters, Soliciting Aid, to Residents of This Area

TELLS OF WORK DONE

Squad is Prepared 24 Hours A Day To Answer All Calls

The Bucks County Rescue Squad is making an appeal for funds and is now engaged in mailing a large number of letters to residents of this and adjoining communities, soliciting their aid.

The solicitation for funds is being handled exclusively by the members of the Squad who decided this year to dispense with the services of an outside concern. The cost of soliciting money in previous years amounted to considerable and so it was decided to dispense with this method.

The officers of the Squad now are as follows:

President, James Bolton, vice president, Harry Lahr; secretary, Charles Von Wallenich; treasurer, Warren Prindle; chief, Russell Marshall; director of first aid, Robert Porter.

The Board of Governors consists of Francis Goebig; Harry Lahr, and John MacAlevey.

The Squad is planning an outing for September 20th, which is to be held at the Can Take It Club, Croydon. There will be all kinds of games and refreshments will be served.

In the letter now being mailed it is stated:

Twenty-four hours every day the Bucks County Rescue Squad is "on the job" with trained first aid volunteers ready to dash anywhere to answer your emergency call. The people of Bucks County are fortunate to have this unit at work, with about one hundred persons giving up much of their time and effort for the benefit of those in trouble. At this time of National emergency, it is especially valuable for us to have a large group that knows what to do in any disaster or major industrial accident.

All the squad members donate their time and services. Funds are needed to pay for gasoline and repairs for the ambulances, to purchase medical supplies and bandages, to buy equipment for the Squad's first aid room, to pay for oxygen for resuscitation, and for similar needs.

Would you co-operate in buying bandages and medical supplies so that first aid treatment may be given to sick and injured people? Would you assist in providing oxygen for drowning cases, shock victims and home emergencies?

Your attention is called to the fact that 100% of the receipts are used exclusively for squad purposes. The squad invites your inspection of their quarters and their books at all times.

SCRAP DRIVE COMMITTEE TO HOLD IMPORTANT MEETING HERE TONIGHT; EVERY RESIDENT URGED TO AID EFFORT

Another enthusiastic meeting to lay salvage campaign is just about one of the easiest patriotic gestures any American can make today. And at the same time it's one of the most valuable.

Some steel mills have closed down and others are threatened with closing, all because of the lack of scrap metal for the manufacture of new steel. And when mills close that means fewer guns, tanks and aircraft for our fighting men. President Roosevelt has made that announcement.

The Bristol portion of the nationwide drive will be conducted between September 28th and October 12th.

Once the scrap has been collected it will be weighed and sold by the Bristol Defense Council at prevailing rates. And all profits derived from the sale of this scrap metal will be used for the purchase of the equipment for air-raid wardens and emergency police.

Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, is heading up the national drive. The need for all vital war materials is most urgent, Mr. Nelson wrote to Gordon Fromm, chairman of the Salvage Committee for Lower Bucks County.

"The immensity of the task we face," Mr. Nelson wrote, "makes it absolutely necessary to step up the tempo of our national salvage program. Our war production is limited only by the supply of raw materials, and scrap is an important part of the raw materials supply. This makes it clear that the only way we can meet the requirements of war production is to collect every last bit of scrap from every farm and home, and from every commercial enterprise and industry in the country."

Various committees to handle the local drive will be selected at tonight's meeting, and the committeemen will complete plans for launching of the local drive next Monday.

Air raid wardens are invited to attend the meeting tonight.

MIDDLETOWN GRANGE HEARS DELEGATES' REPORT

Arrangements Being Made For Pet Show To Be Held September 30th

AN INTERESTING SESSION

LANGHORNE, Sept. 21.—At a recent meeting of the Middletown Grange there were interesting reports presented of the meeting of the Lower Bucks and Philadelphia Pomona Grange, No. 22, held in the Carversville Christian Church. The reports were given by Jesse Webster and Alice Kirk.

Because of the busy season for farmers, only 25 persons attended the meeting of the Middletown Grange and the session was quite brief.

During the business session, which

Attractive Wedding Takes Place In St. Ann's Church

A maid of honor, two bridesmaids and two junior bridesmaids were attendants for Miss Mary A. Spezzano, yesterday at 11 a. m., when she became the wife of Mr. William F. Sacco, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Sacco, of Grantwood, N. J. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spezzano, 603 Pond street.

The attendants were inclusive of: Miss Grace Bono, Dorrance street, maid of honor; Miss Carmella Cerra, Cardonale, and Miss Rose Spezzano, sister of the bride, bridesmaids; the Misses Veronica Spezzano, Franklin street, cousin of the bride, and Elvira Messera, Washington street, junior bridesmaids.

Mr. Sacco was attended by Messrs. Alexander Conti, Franklin street, and James Higby, New York City, as groomsmen; and Mr. Peter N. Spezzano, brother of the bride, and Mr. William DiPasquale, Pond street, were the ushers for the occasion.

The scene of the wedding was St. Ann's R. C. Church. The Rev. Fr. Peter Pinci officiating. Mr. Spezzano gave his daughter away.

A handsome gown of silver French brocade satin, in morning glory design, was chosen by the bride for her wedding day. The gown had a long train. Her veil was of ivory net, it being held in place by lavender orchids. Slippers were of white satin, and she carried a bouquet of orchids, white roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honor wore a gown of heather rose with trim of Victorian blue, and the bridesmaids were attired in floor-length costumes of Victorian blue with trim in the heather rose tone. The taffeta gowns were colonial style. Artificial roses in heather rose tone were worn in their hair, and from these fell velvet streamers. The junior bridesmaids had gowns of pink taffeta, they being colonial style and the skirts featuring ruffles. Slippers were white, and in their hair appeared pink roses from which fell streamers of velvet.

The bride's parents' home was the scene of the wedding breakfast, and at four p. m., a dinner was served in Philadelphia. The evening reception was in Mutual Aid Hall.

For a week's journey to New York City the bride chose a brown suit with trim of velvet; brown suede hat with green trim, top-coat of brown with red fox collar, and a corsage of lavender orchids. The couple will live at the new housing development at Bristol Terrace.

Benjamin Silber Also Provides That Three Years' Dues Be Paid

WILL MADE APRIL 19TH

Mrs. Reba Silber, Widow of Deceased, One of The Executors of Will

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 21.—The Congregation of Ahavas Achim, Pond St., Bristol, is the beneficiary of a gift of $250 under the provisions of the will of Benjamin Silber, Mr. Silber was a well-known Bristol insurance man and died at his home on Jefferson avenue in Bristol on August 9th. In addition to the $250 bequest Mr. Silber also provided that a sum equivalent to three years' dues for membership be given to the Synagogue.

Mr. Silber left a personal estate of $500 and real estate valued at $12,000.

The testator, who executed his will April 19, left real estate at 202 and 212 Jefferson avenue, 401 and 403 Washington street, 432-434-436-438 Pond street, all in Bristol, and 2429 South Fifth street, Philadelphia.

The widow, Reba Silber, 202 Jefferson avenue, and Joseph J. Cohen, 1218 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, are the executors.

A son, Franklin, and the widow, were bequeathed 202 Jefferson avenue as well as the automobiles. He also was given his father's watches, diamonds and jewelry. A sister, Sadie Willig, was given $500.

Trustees of the estate were directed to use the residue and provide an income for the widow. The son, Franklin, will receive his share at the age of 35 years.

Mr. Silber was chaplain of the synagogue.

FAMILIES MOVING INTO DEFENSE HOUSES

Ten of The Dwelling Units Are Now Being Occupied

EXPECT OTHERS DAILY

Families are moving into the Bristol Terrace Defense Housing Project and to date about ten families now occupy housing units of the group. There are in all 200 units to be occupied.

The families are those of defense workers and they come from various communities, most from a distance.

The units are being opened to occupancy as fast as the heating and cooking equipment is approved. The dwellings are heated by gas and the equipment in each has to be tested before they are turned over for use.

The playground to the rear of the Management and Maintenance Building has not as yet been equipped. These grounds, it is reported, are to be fully equipped for the youngsters of the settlement.

More families are expected to move in today and each day new arrivals are anticipated.

Dedication Ceremonies Held at Tabor Dormitory

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Sept. 21.—(INS)—Dedication ceremonies had been completed today at the C. Henry Recker Memorial Girls Dormitory at the Tabor Home for Children in Doylestown.

Prominent Lutheran clergymen from Philadelphia participated in the services. Dr. E. B. Bachmann, superintendent of the Mary Drexel Home, laid the cornerstone, and Dr. Ross Stover, pastor of the Messiah Lutheran Church of Philadelphia, dedicated the building named in honor of the meat merchant and philanthropist who gave $700,000 to charity during his life and through the terms of his will.

Other clergymen who took part in the ceremony were the Rev. Bernard Repass, of Doylestown; Rev. W. Paul Reumann, Lansdale, and the Rev. Floyd Eichner, Philadelphia.

One Man's Opinion By Walter Kiernan (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

A little businessman in Wyoming writes me "It is discouraging to think that we have to beat the Axis and our own politicians at the same time."

It is and we can't do it. We can run Hitler into the ground but we always will have the domestic fuddy-duddy fuddlers.

We can beat a politician but what do we get? Another politician.

Politics is an inexact science practiced by ineffectual men with indescribable results. It brings government with naught but a pretty face.

Any man with a mouthful of good teeth, a shoe shine and a carnation for his buttonhole can become a politician. If he also went to grade school it helps.

We will not hire an electrician, a plumber or a carpenter without some knowledge of his work but we run our multitude of governments by ear, hunch and touch.

We do not ask for recommendations from last employer or character references. No wonder we get stuck so handsomely.

Thought for the day: Hello, suckers!

BRITAIN'S EXAMPLE

With the enemy only twenty miles across the Channel, England has been turning in an astounding production performance. While the United States builds more and more of the Allied bombers and the British concentrate on fighter planes that can not be flown such distances as across the Atlantic, British plane production has doubled in one year and now is believed to equal Germany's.

The new British Sterlings carry eight tons of bombs, even more than the American Boeing Flying Fortresses. The rate of tank production is twice the rate of a year ago, and five times the rate of two years ago. Forty thousand big guns and 25,000,000 rounds of ammunition for them are being turned out each year, as are millions of small arms and 2,000,000,000 rounds of small ammunition.

Six thousand small shops, many of them underground in quarries, make tank parts sufficient to send 3,000 tanks overseas from the United Kingdom in 1941. There are 5,500,000 women in war work, and unmarried women from twenty to thirty may be drafted. Seven of every ten children from fourteen to seventeen are among the two of every three United Kingdom citizens who are in some full-time war activity.

Fifty-two per cent of British income now goes to war production. Workers and employers have sacrificed peacetime rights to insure maximum production. In essential industry, 8,000,000 workers can not quit jobs or be dismissed except by government permission. Working time lost in labor disputes since Dunkerque is less than one hour a worker a year.

Rationing limits weekly individual consumption to two ounces of butter, two ounces of tea, and no gasoline for pleasure driving. No luxuries are produced. Six million acres are under the plow to double domestic food production. In two years Britain has become the most highly mechanized farming country in Europe.

Twelve thousand five hundred medium tanks have been made from 200,000 tons of iron railings. A house-to-house salvage netted 1,000,000 tons of scrap to build 1,000 destroyers. There is a black-out every night. Every man between eighteen and one-half and fifty-one is drafted. That's what Britain is doing in the effort to conquer the conquering Hun.

If Rudolf Hess expected to be rescued he must be becoming weary waiting.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Nov. 25, 1880. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

St. Mark's Church, under the efficient charge of Father Ward, has just undergone a number of improvements which add much to the beauty and comfort of the church. The interior has been newly frescoed, and a painting of St. Mark in the center of the wall over the altar, supported by two other figures, one on each side, form a very attractive group. Other paintings enhance the cheerfulness of the surroundings. On Sunday next, under the guidance of the Lazarist Fathers O'Donahue and Shaw, of Germantown, a mission, or special devotional exercises will be opened, to continue for one week. The exercises will consist of prayers and instructions by the Fathers.

The Knights of Pythias have their annual supper tomorrow evening.

The entire indebtedness upon the Baptist Church has been provided, for except $400, and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Beck, hopes to have it all reduced to naught in the near future.

The river was full of floating ice yesterday and today. Several tons passed Bristol on their way south. They looked out of place battling with the ice, but pushed slowly along shivering the miniature icebergs in their way.

The Bristol Institute met as usual on Tuesday evening. There was a pretty full attendance of members, and a number of visitors. The exercises were of unusual interest, and quite varied, and that the audience was an appreciative one, was shown by the applause manifested several times during the evening.

The annual meeting of the Bristol

Relief Society took place in the lecture room of the Presbyterian Church, Wednesday, November 17th, and the following officers elected for the ensuing year: Emmor Comly, president; J. Wesley Wright, secretary; Mrs. J. Wesley Wright, treasurer; directors, Joshua Peirce, C. E. Scheide, Miss R. Peirce, Mrs. J. M. Knox, Miss Rebecca Slack, Miss Ellen Vanuxem.

The first meeting of the Free Lyceum will be held on next Tuesday evening at Cabene's Hall. The exercises will begin at half-past seven o'clock. As the name of the organization implies, the meetings of the Lyceum will be free, and the public is invited to attend.

William Johnson, who resides on Market street, and is employed as brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, met with a singular accident last night. A loaded gun belonging to the conductor was lying on the seat of the caboose, and Johnson was on the rear platform. Nobody was in the car, but in an inexplicable manner the gun went off, the charge passing through the partition, three inches thick, and striking Johnson in the fleshy part of the leg inflicted a painful but not dangerous wound. If the partition had not intervened the injury would have been very serious.

At the foundry of Thomas B. Hardkins, during the past week, there have been melted an average of 5,383 pounds of iron per day. This is the largest amount of iron ever run out of the furnaces in the same time.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Hugh had been in his room when Chloe left that evening. A good thing, too, or she would have had to explain the satchel containing her costume. She had merely called, "Good night," passing his door, and knew he would suppose she had gone over to Gay's apartment. She had been in 12 every evening of late, helping Gay, as she had said. It was true, of course, and he could say nothing against helping Gay who had helped them so much. He had missed her, that was plain, but he had no wish to follow her over to Gay's apartment.

Paying the taxi, standing unsteadily in the wind, ("Better take a reef in those ears, Miss!" she blew up the walk, made the stairs softly, and let herself into her apartment. The bedside lamp with the plum-red shade had been drawn over to the couch, its light making a red dusk in the room.

Hugh lay on the couch asleep, dressed in the dark-red robe. His book—the unpublished script of Desert-Born—lay on his chest as if he had been reading it. The lamp, directly over him, shed its light, clear and soft, upon his face. So he had found the book, was Chloe's first thought. It had come back to her that morning, after its all-too-brief visit, and she had buried it in her desk, meaning to take it out again after Christmas. The desk was partly his now; she should have remembered that.

She knew that slacks and a blouse hung in the bathroom, and she made quickly for that retreat, intending to change in there. But Hugh lay facing the bathroom, and though she had not made a sound, he opened his eyes, stared at her, and sat up. He sprang from the couch with a start and then dropped back.

"Hugh!" she cried, on her knees beside him. "It's Chloe, Hugh. Don't be silly. Listen!"
"What was it? I mean, how did it happen?"
"I've been to a party," she said. "Why didn't you tell me? I might have gone myself. . . . Oh, I see. You went with someone else."
"No, I went alone."
She saw that he did not believe her. He had been jealous lately of Tandy. . . .

Hugh picked up his script from the floor. His eyes moved over Chloe's costume with frank scorn. "Your concept of fancy dress, I suppose. May I suggest that next time you choose something—more seductive, shall we say, or at any rate, a bit less playful? . . . I am sorry you didn't take me into your confidence. I shouldn't have worried if I had known someone was with you."

"Did you worry, Hugh?"
"I knew you were out," he said, "since Gay's apartment was dark. And the storm. . . ."

I wish I could tell him, she thought. Now that he's seen me. But his script has just come back. . . .
He saw that she was looking at the script.
"You forgot to tell me about this, too," he said. "I suppose your social engagements. . . ."

"I didn't forget. Why should I tell you?"
"Trifle that it was," he added. "But the habit of concealment seems to be growing on you."

And she knew that she should not have used that phrase, "Every time."
He went out, carrying the script. She slid into the big chair, exhausted, knew that she had been talking, overcharged, all evening. Now it was as if she had been pricked, like a balloon. She had actually felt the lightness, the brightness go out of her.
But it was true, what he had said. She was hiding things at every turn. The habit of concealment was growing, was being formed, at any rate.

Now she was not going to hide them any longer. She was going to tell him, keeping back nothing. Not even the fact of her success. For I was a success, she thought. . . . But not to-night. I'll tell him in the morning. After he's had breakfast. . . .

She woke next morning looking out on a day of clear sunlight, on a world white with snow. It was nearly nine o'clock. She must call Rann Sturgis at ten, she remembered.

She didn't want to call him. A dream had visited her in the night, was still dimly in her mind.

In her dream Rann had said, "Don't bother, I know you."
They were standing on the real prairie, and he was out hunting with Reuben and a gun. She had come out of her home in a hollow stump because her ears felt cramped. Encountering Rann and Reuben, fearful that Reuben would betray her, she had started back into the stump. "Don't bother," Rann had said. "I know you. I've known you all along."

She answered, "I planned to tell you anyhow—after breakfast." And she had noticed that Reuben looked thin.
"Reuben looks bad," she said.
Rann explained that Reuben had measles.

And they had walked across the prairie, she and Rann and Reuben. And he had folded up his gun like a jackknife and put it in his pocket. "You ought to move," he said. "You'll never get anywhere, living in that stump."
I wonder if he knows, thought Chloe, viewing the situation in the freshness of the morning.

I'll know when I talk to him. She lay still, listening for sounds in the next room. She had planned to get out early this morning, and do her Christmas shopping. Tomorrow is Sunday, she thought, and Christmas Eve. . . . She had felt rich yesterday. Miss Marchison's check had been augmented by a check from Nate. He had actually re-rented the house.

She still felt rich, but without elation. There was no elation even in the prospects of the shopping that must be done. Hugh and Gay and Nick and Tandy would all be remembering her with gifts; it was in the air. And she could hardly wait to choose presents for them.

No sound from Hugh's room as she dressed and ate her breakfast. Maybe he's sleeping off his mad, she thought. Why do I so often say the wrong thing to him, like that "Every time it comes back"? Why do his moods—his anger, his depression—have that diffusing quality? They sort of charge the air.

She remembered her idea of the night before. Now, her wit keener with the morning, it still seemed good.

But he may not like it at all, she thought. I'll talk it over with him when I get back from town.

It was ten o'clock, and she dialed Rann Sturgis.

The thin, sweet voice. Wang Foo,

"No, Misser Sturgis not in. Gone while ago. . . . No, not in office. Maybe Robinote."
"Robinote?" repeated Chloe.
"Out Long Island. Maybe."
Wang Foo didn't know when Mr. Sturgis would return.
"All day, maybe."
Oh, well. She hadn't wanted to talk with him, anyhow.

She got into hat and coat and went out, crunching through the snowdrifts in the boots with the starchy tops that were like Russian boots.

At the curb stood a long, low convertible that she thought she recognized. And now Rann Sturgis' voice came to her from the steps of 12.

"There you are!" he said, and descended, greeting her as if they had not parted just the night before.

"So you did find it!" she exclaimed. And then realized that her surprise must be for a different reason. "When did you get back?" she asked. (I hope he doesn't recognize the boots.)

"I'm not really back. Just playing hooky. Was due tomorrow, but came last night instead. . . . Were you going somewhere?"
"Later," she answered. "Come in."

"No, I'll drop you. Just wanted to tell you about Miss Dwyer. . . ."

She said, as they drove down the freshly cleared street, with snow piled high on either side and all the fine old doorways decked in holly wreaths: "I was told to call you this morning."

"So you've heard from her. Did she tell you I took her home?"
Chloe smiled. "I'd like to hear your version."

They were moving slowly. "Have you an important errand?" he asked. "Or maybe just drive?"

"Several important errands. Belated presents. A tree and all the trimmings."

She was happy again. The thing she greatly feared had not come upon her. And she was happy just to be riding like this, going shopping.

"Good!" he answered, and seemed happy, too. "I'd like to go with you. Any special place? . . . Then let this be a conducted tour. I know just where to take you."

"About Miss Dwyer," he said, "she was really very good; she has a good voice, just as you say. Lots of romp in her, and pathos, too. Surprisingly shy and quiet when you talk with her, but lets herself go on the platform. If the rest are like that, it may not be such a steep trail for you. Are they?"

"As a matter of fact," said Chloe, "some of them are even better. Did you like her costume?"

"Perfect. It would deceive anyone."

Now what did he mean by that? Nothing, apparently, for he added: "You'll probably have to furnish next year's program, too, for the Good Friend's House."

"That's a long time off," said Chloe, chiefly by way of reassuring herself. "But it's good to have prospects."

"Pretty long," Rann agreed. "In the meantime, you must do some advertising. I'd say a mailing list is needed, first."

Rann said he would have a list compiled for her—clubs and institutions that might be interested. She might use his name in mentioning Miss Dwyer's program. He was certain that Miss Marchison, too, would give her a testimonial for Miss Dwyer.

Tickets for the Philadelphia Victory Garden Harvest Show are being sold locally by Mrs. Serrill D. Delefer, representing the Bristol Travel Club; Mrs. J. C. McCarron, president of the Junior Travel Club; Mrs. M. R. Siegel, president of the Aid to War Victims; and Mrs. Rose Wright, secretary of the Delaware Valley Grange.

Persons having material, fruit, flowers, vegetables, artistic arrangements, etc., are invited to exhibit. There is no entry fee. Entries are open to all. For entry blanks or other information, call the local Victory Garden chairman, Mrs. Earl Tomb.

The Victory Garden Harvest Show will be held in Convention Hall, October 1, 2 and 3. As there will be no spring flower show, all are urged to attend and participate in the Philadelphia Victory Garden Harvest Show.

Tickets purchased before September 28th will be sold at a reduced price.

Entries of home grown vegetables, fruits and flowers, as well as exhibits from garden clubs, community organizations, commercial growers and nurserymen will compete in their respective classes at the Victory Garden Harvest Show which will be staged in Philadelphia Convention Hall, 33rd and Spruce streets, Philadelphia, October 1, 2, 3, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Schedules of exhibits are available at the office of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, 1600 Arch street, Philadelphia. There is no entry fee for exhibitors and entries will be received up to Monday, September 28th.

Tickets purchased in advance will cost 45 cents, including tax, and those purchased at the gate will cost 55 cents, including tax. Eighty-five per cent of the proceeds of the Show will be divided between the Army Emergency Relief and the Navy Relief Society. The Philadelphia Show will be one of the key Shows of 20,000 staged throughout the country and from which it is aimed to raise $2,000,000.

The Philadelphia Show will be a gala affair in every way and a real triumph from a horticultural angle. Competition will run high, especially in the vegetable classes, most of which will have been grown by amateurs. In addition to such displays, many special

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Humphrey Bogart, the man they love to shoot, dying of his wounds, and deservedly so, according to the script of "The Big Shot," his latest Warner Bros. picture, currently at the Grand, played his final and fadeout scene in bed.

This was quite contrary to usual Bogart custom because, as a portrayer of tough roles, he has died violently in many pictures but never before has he been allowed to spend his last moments in bed.

Even more unusual, in Bogart's own opinion, was the fact that he had been given lines to say while dying, lines in which he admitted the error of his ways and advised a young man who had once been an accomplice of his to abandon the easy way of crime for the less promising but more satisfactory path of virtue and honesty.

"All my life in Hollywood," Humphrey commented on his bed of apparent pain. "I've been complaining because Jimmy Cagney or Eddie Robinson or some one else in the pictures I work in has been allowed to talk himself to death on the screen."

BRISTOL THEATRE

"King Kong," the thrillingly imaginative story of a prehistoric ape, taken captive and brought to New York, where it throws the metropolis in a panic and creates tremendous devastation, is at the Bristol Theatre.

Fay Wray plays the girl whose frail, golden beauty so entrances the great beast that his heart for the first time in its seven million years of existence, knows no emotion of tenderness. It is on the girl's behalf that "King Kong" fights prehistoric dinosaurs on his native heath, and later panics a great city.

Robert Armstrong and Bruce Cabot portray two adventurers seeking to get a motion picture of a legendary ape and to make a drama out of his

FRANKLIN DEFEATS 3RD WARD; TAKES LEAD FOR TITLE

Winners Showed Plenty of Power in Their Batting Ability

WINS TWO GAMES

Third Ward Entered Finals By Defeating the Croydon
Nine

The Franklin team of the Diamond Youth League possessed plenty of power in its batting over the week-end as it took the lead in the playoff series for the Bristol championship.

Yesterday the Franklin boys steam-rolled the Third Ward to a 10-2 defeat and Saturday the Franklin youths eliminated the Voltz-Texaco boys from the playoffs with a 9-3 victory. Third Ward entered the finals with a close 8-7 victory over Croydon.

In the two games Franklin made a total of 21 hits, including eight doubles. While this was going on, the Franklin opponents were having difficulty in solving the hooks of the pair of Franklin hurlers, "Toby" Oriola and Joe Sagolla.

Saturday, Oriola held Voltz to four hits and yesterday Sagolla allowed the boys from down the Pike but three hits. Both pitchers were given good support in the pinches. The Franklin team put their final game on ice in the last inning by scoring four runs.

Third Ward entered the finals by beating out Croydon in the last inning after the visitors had led from the start. A two-bagger from the bat of George Hinchliffe and then a clean hit to left by Johnny Elmer gave the Third Warders the triumph.

ASHBY'S SINGLE HELPS EDGELY DEFEAT VOLTZ

A single to left field by Turner Ashby helped Edgely to score a 3-1 victory over the Voltz-Texaco team yesterday afternoon on the Edgely diamond. Ashby's blow scored what proved to be the winning marker although he scored himself to make victory certain.

The opposing hurlers were Howard Black and Hal Shackleton. Voltz had deadlocked the score in the seventh when Mazzillo scored on a bad throw after being trapped between third base and home.

Stan Folkner, Edgely shortstop, was injured in the last inning when struck in the nose with a thrown ball.

Next Sunday, Edgely, the Bristol Suburban League champs, will play the Fleetwings Arrows in a benefit game for the USO. The game will be played on the Edgely diamond.

Scores by Innings:

Voltz-Texaco	0	0	0	0	1	0-1
Edgely	1	0	0	0	0	2-3

Middletown Grange Hears Delegates' Reports

was in charge of the master, Herman Hoston, announcement was made that two former members of the Grange, Dr. Weber and Mrs. Howard Brown, had died recently.

Members celebrating birthday anniversaries in September had been designated to present the program last evening, but only two persons observing birthday anniversaries this month were present. They were Charles Lowmes, Jr., and Robert Miller, and they gave a brief program of music. Robert Miller also spoke briefly of the rationing of fuel oil, and a number of members of the Grange took part in a discussion relating to the fixing of farm prices.

The next meeting of the Grange will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hoston, Newtown township, on Wednesday evening, September 30, when a pet show will be the main feature. All members of the Grange have been requested to bring their pets to that meeting.

More Selectees Go From Doylestown Area

lectees cared nothing about the farewell shower; they all seemed ready to go and do their bit.

The contingent of 20 selectees who left for Fort Meade, was in charge of Howard Y. Nice, 28 East Oakland avenue, foreman of the composing room of the "Daily Intelligencer." Twenty-one selectees leaving for New Cumberland were in charge of William A. Clayton, of Trenton, N. J., a former resident of New Hope.

Doylestownians who left for Fort Meade, in addition to Howard Y. Nice, included Leon W. Klinger, Frederick W. Trautman, Theodore E. DuBois, Frederick P. Reimer and Frank T. Kentopp. County Seat selectees who were in the New Cumberland group included William F. VanLuvane, Edward Dilwyn Darlington, Robert D. Hein and Earl Williamson.

Others who left for Fort Meade included Robert C. Case, New Hope; Edwin H. Cockill, Plumsteadville; Harold L. Myers, Hilltown; Karl J. Lukas, New Hope; William W. Reigel, Erwinna; Carl L. Bishop, Doylestown; R. D. 2; John E. Landis, Trumbull, Conn.; William H. Strouse, Pipersville; Harold F. Long, Gardenville; George D. Bentzley, Perkaskie R. D. 3; Tony Orszak, Holicon; Alfred T. Renner, Blooming Glen; Arthur E. Shadinger, Pipersville; Robert T. Gross, Chalfont.

Others in the New Cumberland contingent included: Robert W. Weaver, Frenchtown, N. J.; Frank N. Loris, Fricks; John L. Hartley, Philadelphia; John J. Tiernan, New Hope; Charles Rohman, Jr., Doylestown R. D. 2; John Hartman, 3d, New Hope; Frederick L. Horner, New Hope; Walter C. Thatcher, Chalfont; Allen L. Van-Pelt, Pineville; Harold H. Schweiger, Telford; Harry H. Yoder, Souderton; Edward S. Knechel, Weisel; Cyrus R. Hoagland, New Hope; George A. Lear, Ottsville R. D. 1; Stephen V. Giedgowd, R. D. 1.

The next call for registrants to undergo physical examination at the Allentown Induction Center, from the Local Draft Board District No. 3 greatly disturbed. Quite plainly, they felt that whoever else Mr. Roosevelt gets tough with he isn't going to get very tough with them. Subsequent developments seem to justify this feeling.

(Doylestown and vicinity), is scheduled for Thursday, October 8th.

The Great Game of Politics

ONE of these developments is the form of the legislation which, in response to the Presidential demand, Congress seems sure to pass before October 1. This legislation is not going to make it mandatory upon the President, or even give him the opportunity, to lower our standard of living, which is what he insisted is essential during the war. On the contrary, it is going to make sure not only that it is not lowered but that a standard—at least for organized labor and the farmer—which has been raised to a higher level than ever before, is fully maintained. That is the essence of the pending legislation. Apparently, when passed, the bill will authorize ceilings on both wages and farm products, but it will also put a floor under both at the present unprecedentedly high level. There will be no rolling back of prices or wages. That seems clear.

ALSO, the floor is likely to be rigid but the ceiling not. That is the way the thing looks today. This is not, of course, in accord with either of the President's speeches and it falls far short of the necessities. Yet the Administration leaders, who reflect the President's views, are framing the bill and it is they who will pass it. Despite the fact that he did knock out the outrageous Steagall proposal to change the definition of parity, no sacrifice is involved in the prospect for either of the favored groups. A second development, which would seem to explain the equanimity with which the labor bosses receive the wage-control program, is the action last Thursday of a War Labor Board panel in recommending wage increases from 2½ to 15 per cent for 14,000 copper, lead and zinc workers. This would mean a departure from the board's own "Little Steel" principle, which limits wages to cover the fifteen per cent increase in the cost of living since January, 1941. Though the employer member vigorously protested, the belief is the full board will sustain its panel.

IT ALWAYS has and this would seem to make a joke of the President's toughness. It is ridiculous, anyhow, that at a time when he is publicly urging that wages must not go up, an agency which he created—and controls—should be taking steps to authorize an increase in wages, which would certainly be followed by many other similar demands. Perhaps, ridiculous is not the right word. There are several others, harsher but more suitable. At any rate, this action plus the Congressional situation make it easy to understand why the President's labor friends are not alarmed.

STILL, ANOTHER indication that the President's toughness is more oratorical than real is found in his inertia toward the pending tax bill. In his speeches he unequivocally asserted the need for a comprehensive and adequate tax bill, which would absorb the vast purchasing power the war billions have put in the hands of the people. The present bill is not comprehensive and is grossly inadequate. No comprehensive and adequate program has come from the Treasury, though it is fair to say that what Mr. Morgenthau urged was better than what we seem likely to get. Yet the Treasury, presumably reflecting the President's views, consistently has opposed the sales tax, which is the only practical step by which this bill could be made fully comprehensive and adequate. To urge a comprehensive and adequate taxation program and then prevent it from being either does not make sense, but that, nevertheless, is the situation.

CONSIDERING all these things, the hope, born on April 24 when his seven-point anti-inflation program was announced, and renewed on September 7 when it was reaffirmed, that Mr. Roosevelt meant really to grapple with the inflation threat, seems slightly sick at the moment. There is no sign that either farm prices or wages will be rigidly controlled at an effective level. But, even if that were done, without a tax program that will reach every group of producers and consumers and not merely be levied largely on less than half the national income and on a still smaller percentage of the population, inflation cannot be successfully fought. Wage and price control are essential but supplemental to the right kind of tax program. The President, himself, has said so, but as yet he has not put himself effectively behind any of the three. In these matters he talks tougher than he acts. It might be a good idea to stop referring to officials here as "tough." Or, at any rate, not to call them tough until they are tough.

Red Cross Juniors To Send Gifts Abroad

who comprise the Junior Red Cross in Phila., Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties will give the many articles contained in the gift boxes. Each gift box contains at least 18 items, including such things as small dolls, toy games, ball, puzzles, models, whistles, etc. Thus a single gift box is usually filled not by one, but by two to 18 children and all the presents contained in the boxes are new.

These gift boxes filled by Red Cross Juniors in the Phila. area will be completed and shipped by the first of October in order that the child refugees in England to whom they are being sent may receive the gifts for Christmas. Many of these gift boxes will be sent to the several war nurseries established in England by American Junior Red Cross to take care of small children made homeless by air raids.

American Juniors in other parts of the country are carrying on this program. The gift boxes filled by Juniors on the West Coast will be sent chiefly to China.

In addition to sending these gifts to child war victims abroad the Red Cross Juniors in the Phila. area are starting an ambitious work program, to make hundreds of articles for hospitalized American soldiers and sailors. Juniors who are in Home Economics courses make such things as lap robes, bedroom slippers, card table covers, and hospital bedside bags.

Those in manual training classes make game boards—cribbage, backgammon—checker, and chess sets, darts and dart boards, jig saw puzzles, ping pong tables and paddles.

Art pupils will produce bridge score pads, clipping books, flower vases, crossword puzzles, comic cartoon scrap books and so forth.
